What is SSIP?

SSIP stands for Safety Schemes in Procurement, which is a set of health and safety assessment criteria used to evaluate the competence and performance of contractors and sub contractors. It is supported by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE).

Some benefits of SSIP are:

Streamlined procurement process:

By using an SSIP provider, buyers can avoid duplicating the work of assessing suppliers' health and safety compliance, as this is done once through the SSIP scheme.

Cost-effective:

As the health and safety assessment is done once, suppliers do not need to incur the costs of multiple assessments for different buyers, reducing their financial burden.

Consistent standards:

SSIP questionnaires use a consistent core criteria to ensure that suppliers meet the same high levels of health and safety standards.

Better risk management:

Buyers can reduce the risk of working with suppliers who do not meet health and safety standards, reducing the risk of accidents and injuries.

Improved reputation:

Suppliers can demonstrate their commitment to health and safety, which can improve their reputation and increase their chances of winning contracts.

Setting the standard in business practice
